

Dr Nikolaos G. Papadopoulos is a medical doctor specialized in Pediatric Allergy, currently head of research at the Allergy Department, 2nd Pediatric Clinic, University of Athens, Greece.

Dr Papadopoulos research focuses on the role of respiratory infections in allergy and asthma. He is the author of numerous papers and book chapters, the Editor-in-chief of the EAACI website and assistant editor of the World Allergy Organization (WAO) website. He has served as member of the Executive Committees of the European Academy of Allergy and Clinical Immunology (EAACI) and the Network of Excellence "GA²LEN".

He has being invited to present lectures in many international meetings and has received international awards for his research on the role of rhinoviruses in inducing asthma exacerbations.